Beauty queen 'faked cancer' for profit: Cops

Scam. Brandy Weaver-Gates, a Miss Pennsylvania International, is accused of fraud after fundraisers.

A beauty queen from central Pennsylvania has been accused of faking cancer and taking the money raised in fundraisers.

Brandy Weaver-Gates, 23, of Pleasant Gap, Pennsylvania, was charged with fraud in the case after an anonymous informant tipped off Pennsylvania State Police.

In a news release, police said Weaver-Gates began telling people she had chronic lymphocytic leukemia in 2013. She allegedly went so far as to produce forged bills from Johns Hopkins University Hospital.

Her family drove her to hospitals where she would allegedly wait inside and pretend to get treatments, NBC10 reported.

Weaver-Gates won the title of Miss Pennsylvania International — one of many beauty pageants. It is not to be confused with the pageant circuit that sends contestants to the Miss USA and Miss Universe events. Miss Pennsylvania International contestants compete to become Miss USA International.

Online reactions

The reaction on Weaver-Gates' Facebook page has been swift — with some people noting that Weaver-Gates may have deleted photos showing she had cancer.

- "Go to Stillbrave Childhood Cancer Foundation and read the stories of 200 children who have / had / or have lost their battle with cancer. My son is #9. These children are beautiful, brave and heroic. You are worthless and despicable," wrote Facebook poster Kristin Rovito Crunick.

Butler's Beauties, organizer of the Miss Pennsylvania International, stripped Weaver-Gates of her tiara and issued a statement saying they too were fooled.

"We were also led to believe that she was dealing with this horrible disease and stood by her as she struggled being a beauty queen and a cancer patient," the company said.

State police say that the community held many fundraisers to benefit Weaver-Gates. They are asking anyone who donated money to contact them.

Dalai Lama to visit Philly universities in October

The Dalai Lama will visit Philadelphia in October and host a couple of public events.

His Holiness will be in the City of Brotherly Love — a month after Pope's Francis' visit — to receive the Liberty Medal and also take part in some public events over the course of two days. Tickets go on sale today.

He will first stop by La Salle University on Monday, Oct. 26, at 1 p.m. to give a public teaching on the Eight Verses for Training the Mind.

On Tuesday, Oct. 27, he will stop by Temple University's Liacouras Center to hold a public forum called Finding Happiness in Troubled Times: Educating the Heart in the 21st Century at 9:30 a.m.

Tickets for both events can be purchased online at DalaiLamaPhilly.org.

The Liberty Medal Ceremony tickets will go on sale in September.

Crime

Boyfriend pinched over 'liking' Facebook posts

A Pennsylvania man was charged with contempt of court for hitting the "like" button too many times on his ex-girlfriend's Facebook page.

Justin Belanco, 26, of Jenkins Township near Wilkes-Barre, had been the subject of a protection from abuse order that stated he was to have no contact with the victim, the Wilkes-Barre Times Leader reports.

He was arrested Monday after liking 22 photos and videos on his ex-girlfriend's Facebook page. DAN KELLEY

Indicted Pa. AG defiant, proclaims innocence

Defense. Attorney General Kathleen Kane said she has not broken any laws.

Pennsylvania Attorney General Kathleen Kane, who has been charged with leaking secret grand jury material to the media, maintained on Wednesday that she "broke no laws" and said her enemies were trying to draw attention away from their links to pornographic emails she uncovered.

Kane, 49, spoke at a news conference at the Capitol building, her first remarks since she was arraigned on Saturday.

"My defense will not be that I am the victim of some old-boys' network. It will be that I broke no laws of the commonwealth. Period," Kane said.

Kane, a Democrat, has been feuding with prosecutor Frank Fina. Fina worked for former Republican Attorney General Tom Corbett, who later went on to serve as governor.

Last year, Kane investigated how Corbett handled the probe into child sex abuse charges against former Penn State University assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky. Her investigation uncovered scandalous emails containing explicit material, many of which originated with former state prosecutors.

Fina, the chief Sandusky prosecutor, obtained an order from Montgomery County Common Pleas Judge William Carpenter barring release of any e-mails that Fina had sent under grounds they were protected by grand jury secrecy.

In October 2014, Kane allowed reporters to review some of the emails. The resulting stories led to Pennsylvania Supreme Court Justice Seamus McCaffery resigning while a number of Corbett administration staffers either were fired, resigned or were reprimanded.

The Montgomery County district attorney has charged Kane with leaking grand jury testimony, perjury and obstruction of justice. The indictment said she leaked the material to discredit Fina. REUTERS

Zoning battle over 'gun store' loophole

Hold your fire.
Gun control groups, range owner square off.

Lawyers for the owner of a Philadelphia gun range said a quirk in the city's zoning code should allow them to sell guns — an argument that has drawn the ire of gun control groups that packed a zoning hearing Wednesday over the range's plans.

"There's a lot of emotion involved," said Christopher Garber, a firearms instructor who came out in support of the gun store.

The debate comes at a time when gun rights groups and cities across the state are locked in a battle over the degree to which municipalities can regulate guns, and gun control groups see a potential impact across the state.

The Gun Range, a gun range near 11th and Spring Garden streets, applied through the city's Department of Licenses and Inspections to begin selling firearms. That application was denied, setting the stage for the hearing. Lawyers for the business argued that the city's zoning code doesn't actually contain a definition of a firing range. But the code defines a gun shop as any place that sells or lends firearms or sells ammunition.

The Gun Range sells ammo, and they rent guns to people who want to shoot. Therefore, lawyers argue, they are already a gun store, and the city was wrong to deny their application for a gun store.

"This is an attempt to undo zoning laws," said Shira Goodman, of CeaseFire PA.

Jackpot. Ernst & Young's big A.C. haul

Atlantic City / GETTY IMAGES

New Jersey is spending at least $1.7 million, more than twice as much as previously known, on professionals, mainly from the audit firm Ernst & Young LLP, to turn around distressed gambling hub Atlantic City.

The city's tax base shrank by two-thirds in five years because of casino competition from neighboring states, prompting Governor Chris Christie, now a 2016 Republican presidential candidate, to appoint Kevin Lavin as the city's emergency manager in January.

Under Lavin, EY billed $1.25 million for its second phase of work, currently underway, to develop a long-term recovery strategy, according to documents obtained through a public records request. Costs could keep growing as consultants determine how to rebuild the city.

The level of spending on outside professionals for a distressed city is "unprecedented for New Jersey," said Marc Pfeiffer, a Rutgers University senior policy fellow who served for 26 years in the state's local government oversight agency.

Christie's office said in a statement that Lavin and his team are "working diligently with Atlantic City and other stakeholders to identify the solutions that will assist the city in establishing long-term fiscal stability."

EY said it "does not have any additional insights to share at this time."

The oceanfront resort had the highest U.S. metro foreclosure rate in the first half of 2015, and Atlantic County lost a larger percentage of jobs last year than any other big county in the nation.

Meet Philly's biggest Vine star

Six seconds. He has more than 85,000 followers.

Peter Heacock never imagined that six-second video clips on the popular app Vine would make him a star one day, but that's exactly what happened.

In May 2013, a few months after he began using the app, a fellow Vine user who goes by the handle Nick Mastodon contacted him with an invitation to join a private chat group named "Super Mario Bros. Climbing Plant."

It turned out that some of the best-known Vine users had been chatting there for weeks. Some celebrities and comedians, such as Andy Milonakis and Bo Burnham, had participated in the chat room.

"It was like being added into the cool kids' club," Heacock said in an interview with Jerry Iannelli for City Paper. "It was sort of like the first day of school, where you're picking all your new friends. The 80-plus members of the community were sort of the 'Who's Who' of Vine for the first two and a half years. Some of these kids have gone on to be mega-famous."

The group also included popular Vine users like Frenchman Jerome Jarre, who has amassed more than 8 million followers; Rudy Mancuso, who records clips with Justin Bieber; and Brandon Bowen — the 17-year-old from Georgia — who collaborates with actors Josh Peck and John Stamos.

Heacock, who has over 85,000 followers, is by far the most popular person to use an app in Philadelphia and potentially the biggest driver of "youth culture" in the country just by posting six-second videos.

But just two years ago Heacock — who has a film degree from New York University's Tisch School for the Arts — was working as a waiter at Sancho Pistola's restaurant in Philly when a friend told him about Vine. He started cutting his own comedy skits, many featuring his then 3-month-old son. Clips with him explaining the birds and the bees to his infant son took him out of anonymity and turned him into the Internet phenomenon he is now.

A still of one of Heacock's clips / PETER HEACOCK

He soon realized that the chat group was sitting on a potential goldmine with all the videos posted, and wanted to see if he could make them go viral. He went on to post a series of Vines from his friend Ridd Sorensen, in which Siri — the voice of iPhone — insults him.

"I went on the Facebook page and was, like, 'Let's make Ridd famous today,'" Heacock said. "So I put the video on Reddit. Within an hour, it was on top of Reddit, and two days later it had close to a million views."

Dom Hofmann and Rus Yusupov launched Vine in 2013 with the concept that it would simply be "Twitter for video." But after an update let users film with a smartphone's front-facing selfie camera, teens began to use the app to film themselves instead of what was happening around them.

Twitter then began to connect Vine users with brands and during that time Heacock decided to found UnPopular Now, a collective of the most popular stars in social media, such as David Lopez, who has 5.7 million followers, and Batdad with 3.4 million.

Once word got around, a representative from Twitter contacted Heacock asking if he knows anyone willing to put some stuff together for Budweiser.

Check out more in this week's City Paper. /CITY PAPER

Vine stars who get advertisers usually can get paid anywhere from $5,000 to $100,000 depending on the product and company.

But Heacock, who has turned the venture into a full-time endeavor, just wants to create enough to sustain an entertainment business from Philly and take care of his wife and son, with another child on the way soon.

Second down: Brady,

Impasse. With no agreement between Tom Brady and NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell, the case returns to court on Aug. 19.

Lawyers for New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady and NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell argued about the star QB's role in last winter's Deflategate scandal and subsequent four-game suspension in Manhattan federal court on Wednesday.

They did not reach an agreement and are due back in court on Aug. 19.

The civil sentencing conference was presided over by Judge Richard Berman, who had pressed both sides to settle the suspension controversy before it reached his courtroom.

"Some like them inflated more, some less," Berman said of Brady's footballs. At issue is whether the NFL's collective bargaining agreement was violated, which Goodell lawyer Daniel Nash said was followed "completely."

Brady's lawyers maintained that there was no direct evidence that tied Brady to the football being deflated, and they maintained that the quarterback would have turned over emails and text messages had he been told he would have been punished for not doing so.

"If anyone said 'turn over the emails,' he would have done so," said Brady's attorney Jeffrey Kessler.

The Goodell and Brady camps sat at separate tables, Brady behind Goodell, and both teams met privately in Judge Berman's chambers.

Before the hearing, Brady fans and foes gathered outside the Daniel Patrick Moynihan U.S. Courthouse in lower Manhattan, waiting for him to arrive.

"Tom Brady is the greatest thing in existence," said Mike Wanders, 26, of Queens, who wore a Brady jersey.

A handful of what seemed to be Brady adversaries wore plush, deflated football hats across the street from the courthouse. The hat wearers, however, were hawking the wares on behalf of Airheadzzz, a company that sells Deflategate hats.

"I want to know if he really did it," said Enid Peralta, 37, of the Bronx, who was wearing one of the hats. "I'm interested in the integrity of the game," said the Giants fan.

Richie Campos, an ironworker on a coffee break, said Brady had no choice but to fight the four-game suspension.

"If he doesn't fight, it's going to seem like he did know and he looks guilty, so [he must fight so] he doesn't look like a cheater" said Campos, from Far Rockaway.

By the numbers

ESPN recently polled 100 NFL players on the scandal. Seventy-two percent believe the Patriots deflated the footballs.

84%

Of poll respondents, 84 percent said they are not upset by it.

Inside the courthouse, a few fans settled in for the hearing in an overflow room. Trevor Schramm, 20, had to turn his "Free Tom Brady" T-shirt inside out to get in.

"We've got to defend the wall, somehow. We have to support our boy," said Schramm, who took time out of his New York City vacation to attend the suspension conference.

"It's the least we can do for him."

Five things you need to know

1 California wildfire grows as crews work to protect communities

A wildfire running rampant through drought-parched vegetation in Northern California grew by several thousand acres overnight into Wednesday, as firefighters worked to stop the flames from spreading toward communities.

The so-called Jerusalem Fire, which was sparked on Sunday, has grown to cover 16,500 acres (6,677 hectares) of dry and rural ranchland north of Napa Valley wine country and is only 6 percent contained, the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection said.

The fire has displaced about 150 people and threatens at least 50 more houses and ranches, department spokesman Steve Swindle said.

He said that while the burn area is sparsely populated, firefighters were working to keep flames from spreading south and threatening the communities around Lake Berryessa.

Overnight, firefighters merged part of the fire's northeastern edge with a southwestern stretch of a behemoth 69,636-acre blaze nearby, known as the Rocky Fire, as a way of burning through combustible vegetation, Swindle said.

"There is a lot of unburned fuel between those two fires," he said. REUTERS

2 US military helicopter crashes off Okinawa, seven hurt

A U.S. military helicopter crashed in waters off the Japanese southern island of Okinawa during a training mission on Wednesday, injuring seven people and prompting Japan's government to demand a probe and steps to prevent a recurrence.

3 Retailer-developed mobile wallet to rival Apple Pay set for test

A retailer-backed rival to Apple Inc.'s Apple Pay mobile wallet will be tested with customers in a handful of stores in the next few weeks, ratcheting up competition in an increasingly cluttered market.

CurrentC was developed by a consortium of retailers under the Merchant Customer Exchange, which includes Wal-Mart Stores Inc., Target Corp. and Best Buy Co. Inc.

The mobile wallet will be in the stores of about half a dozen retailers in Columbus, Ohio. REUTERS

4 Texas county deputy fired after police K-9 dies in hot car

Officials in a Texas county fired a deputy whose police dog died after he left it in his patrol car for more than 20 hours on a hot day, the Jim Wells County Sheriff's Office said on Wednesday.

The office has referred the case to the district attorney for the county west of Corpus Christi for possible prosecution.

The dog handler, Latham Roldan, is thought to have left the dog, Jola, in the patrol car earlier this week without activating any of the systems the sheriff's office has in place to protect dogs from the heat, the office said. REUTERS

5 Kraft Heinz to cut 2,500 jobs in US and Canada

Kraft Heinz said it will eliminate 2,500 jobs in the United States and Canada, including about 700 at its headquarters in Northfield, Illinois.

Heinz, backed by Warren Buffett's Berkshire Hathaway and Brazilian private equity firm 3G Capital — known as an aggressive cost-cutter — combined with Kraft in March in a $46 billion deal that created the third-largest North American food company.

Kraft Heinz currently has about 46,000 employees, including about 1,900 at the company's headquarters, spokesman Michael Mullen said in an emailed statement to Reuters on Wednesday. REUTERS

Riot-torn Ferguson stays in state of emergency

Control. The decision was made following a shooting incident at a protest on Sunday night.

The St. Louis suburb of Ferguson, Missouri, the site of a year of occasionally violent protests over the police killing of an unarmed black teen, will remain under a state of emergency for at least another night, county officials said on Wednesday.

The decision came after two nights of relatively peaceful protests, with the St. Louis County Police reporting no arrests or reports of injuries during a small demonstration by several dozen people Tuesday night into Wednesday morning.

A crowd of several dozen protesters took to West Florissant Avenue, which bore the brunt of the rioting, on Tuesday night. Demonstrators occasionally attempted to block traffic and threw rocks at police, but the conflict was defused, and no injuries to civilians or police were reported, county police said early Wednesday.

Police shot and critically wounded an 18-year-old black teen they said had fired at them during Sunday night's protests, when windows of businesses along the commercial stretch were smashed.

Police on Tuesday released a video of that shooting that they said showed the teen, Tyrone Harris, drawing a pistol from his pants. Harris has been charged with four counts of assault on law enforcement, five counts of armed criminal action and one count of shooting at a vehicle. Bond for Harris, who is black, was set at $250,000.

"I am pleased to report our law enforcement officers have established order while preventing further acts of violence in Ferguson. It is because of their ability to maintain order that I find it prudent to continue the state of emergency for at least the next 24 hours."

Space station run. Orbital ATK buys second Atlas rocket launch

Orbital ATK Inc is buying a second Atlas rocket launch to fly supplies to the International Space Station for NASA while it redesigns its Antares booster following a launch accident last year, the aerospace company said on Wednesday.

The Oct. 28 accident, which occurred seconds after launch from Virginia's Wallops Island, destroyed a Cygnus capsule filled with cargo bound for the space station. A final report on the accident is pending.

In December, Orbital said it had bought an Atlas rocket launch from United Launch Alliance, a partnership of Lockheed Martin Corp. and Boeing Co., to help fulfill its $1.9 billion cargo delivery contract with NASA while it recovers from the accident.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed. The launch is targeted for early December from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station in Florida to the space station, a permanently staffed, $100 billion research laboratory.

The United Launch Alliance Atlas V rocket / NASA HANDOUT

Miles

The space station flies about 250 miles above Earth.

After the accident, Orbital also advanced plans to replace Antares' troubled Soviet-era engines with new Russian-made RD-181 motors. The refurbished rocket is expected to be ready to fly in early 2016, with one or two more missions to follow that year, Orbital said.

The purchase of a second Atlas launch for a station resupply mission in 2016 will give Orbital some flexibility to deliver the maximum amount of cargo to the station under terms of its NASA contract, said Orbital spokeswoman Trina Helquist. REUTERS

Scary clowns are no laughing matter

Photography series

Spine-chilling clown portraits

For centuries, clowns have performed in street parades and circuses to make people laugh. However, these creepy portraits of retired clowns from Europe will wipe the smile off anyone who sees them. The "Clownville" series by photographer Eolo Perfido looks at the fear inspired by these characters: coulrophobia. METRO WORLD NEWS

EOLO PERFIDO

Q&A

Eolo Perfido, a French photographer based in Rome

Do you like clowns or were you scared of them when you were a child?
I've never been afraid of them.

Why did you make a series on these rather frightful-looking characters?
I've been always interested in clowns and in any performing art form that uses the artist's body and gestures to exaggerate emotional truths that could not be conveyed through speech. I was inspired by actors like Charlie Chaplin or Buster Keaton, by many movies, novels and comics. As you can imagine I've a huge collection of clown-related memorabilia. So it was natural at a certain point of my career to imagine a personal project dedicated to the clowns.

Your series is called "Clownville." Is that the name of a place?
Clownville is an imaginary place; it's a land where everybody is a clown. Throughout my travels there, I simply asked some of the residents to be photographed.

Are the models in the photos real clowns?
Some of them are, others are people from the entertainment industry or from some cultural environment. Some of them are just friends or strangers I've met.

What is the message behind the photographs?
I think that the circus world — and the clown's world in particular — is like a metaphor of our own society: an "interconnected" world where everybody wants to entertain and be entertained, behind which great sadness and loneliness are hidden.

Straight outta the past

Aldis Hodge, Neil Brown Jr., Corey Hawkins, Jason Mitchell and O'Shea Jackson Jr. star in "Straight Outta Compton."

THE FUN STARTS HERE

F. Gary Gray brings N.W.A's story to the screen — and shines a light on life today.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

F. Gary Gray's "Straight Outta Compton," chronicling the band N.W.A's rise to fame, is laced with images of a militarized police force, frayed tensions between cops and communities and protests erupting over police brutality going unpunished, in this case after the Rodney King trial. Gray's look back seems uncomfortably contemporary.

The 'Bye, Felicia' origin, revealed — sorta

There's a moment in "Straight Outta Compton" when an angry husband storms N.W.A's hotel suite looking for his wife, Felicia, and threatening violence. When the group ejects her from the party, Ice Cube (O'Shea Jackson Jr., Cube's real-life son) utters the now famous "Bye, Felicia." So are we witnessing the saying's roots?

"It's not the true origin. Shea came up with it at the end of the day, at four o'clock in the morning. It was a coincidence that her name was Felicia in the script, and it was just an off-the-cuff improv moment," director F. Gary Gray explains. "The creation of 'Bye, Felicia' actually happened in rehearsals for my movie 'Friday.' We put it in 'Friday,' and somehow it just took on a life of its own. I have no idea how or why it's even relevant right now. For the life of me, I wish I was smart enough to tell you how and why, but I'm rolling with it."

GETTY IMAGES

Your story takes place decades ago but is so remarkably relevant to today.

We didn't set out to prove a point in that way. I just wanted to stay true to the N.W.A story. These guys had a huge impact on popular culture. It's American history.

With so many recent instances of police brutality, how do you stay optimistic?

It's one thing when it's in the shadows or happens every once in a while and then we move on to another story about Kim Kardashian, but it's happening so often that you can't help but push for change. Maybe I'm optimistic to a fault and maybe this country will continue to go down the road of criminally destroying people, but I just don't believe that. What makes me less optimistic is how quickly people do move on from these stories. But the video lasts forever. If you're an officer, and you know that your kids are going to see what you did, time after time on CNN, choking someone out or using excessive force, I think that type of pressure could shift the thinking of any human being, unless you're evil, and I don't believe in inherent evil.

How did you choose what to leave out?

My job is just to serve the story and make sure all the choices serve the themes that we've set out to achieve. It was hard to sift through what we had and pick and choose. There was so much drama, so much controversy. Besides casting the movie, that was the hardest thing for me.

Were there any particular moments you were sad to see go?

There were some of the relationships with the women in their lives that I would've loved to see a little more of. But you never know when that might be coming. Maybe there's a director's cut.

Another side of Marlon Brando

Rebecca Brando reflects on her father in honor of the new doc "Listen to Me Marlon."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Amazingly, Marlon Brando, portrayed in the doc "Listen to Me Marlon," out now, was the only one of the four leads in "A Streetcar Named Desire" to not win an Oscar. ALAMY/SHOWTIMEPHOTO

Through most of his life, Marlon Brando was as acclaimed as he was feared, seen as eccentric if not difficult — if not perhaps out of his mind. But that's not how Rebecca Brando, one of his 16 children, saw him. She knew a loving, selfless father and a radical pioneer as willing to help his fellow man as he was to prank them.

That side — articulate, thoughtful, restless, funny — is on display in "Listen to Me Marlon," a new documentary that uses never-made-public audio recordings he made to let the actor tell his own story.

The film doesn't just set certain records straight, but it allows many to see a new side of him.

"I'm just relieved that it shows my father as a person and not just this superstar," Rebecca says of the film, directed by Stevan Riley. In the past, Rebecca would often find people assumed the worst about her father, to her face. "I would go over to a friend's house and the parents immediately wanted to see me and talk to me, about his weight issues or tell me, 'Your father's not very pleasant on sets.' They weren't sensitive that, hey, he's my father."

"Listen to Me Marlon" also sheds a sympathetic light on his political actions, which were sometimes lauded (his work with the Civil Rights movement) and sometimes belittled (having Native American activist Sacheen Littlefeather accept his "Godfather" Oscar).

"He always had great ideas to make things better, not just for movies but in people's personal lives," Rebecca says. He worked with UNICEF and stood with Martin Luther King Jr. After Bobby Hutton was killed by police, Brando spoke at his funeral. "The Panthers trusted him, because they believed his sincerity. My dad would do unprecedented things like that. He was one of the first white men to stand up for people who were vulnerable and oppressed."

Marlon's actions during that time drew the ire of the South, so much so that a film of his — Charles Chaplin's "A Countess from Hong Kong" — was banned in certain states. "He didn't care," Rebecca says. "He wanted to be remembered as more than an actor."

Later, after a stint away from movies, he made "A Dry White Season," concerning apartheid. He even donated his salary to an anti-apartheid foundation.

Rebecca Brando GETTY IMAGES

Brando, prankster

Rebecca also recalls a funnier Brando. His favorite tool was whoopee cushions. "He would have them planted around the house, wherever you'd sit," she says. "It's one way he would break the ice. It's how he broke the ice with Johnny Depp," his costar in 1995's "Don Juan De Marco."

The light side went hand-in-hand with his very serious side. "Even after 'Streetcar Named Desire' he toyed with becoming a minister," Rebecca explains. "He was so interested in the human condition. That's what grounded him."

Henry Cavill and Armie Hammer get close in "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." WARNER BROS. PICTURES

'The Man From UNCLE'

Director: Guy Ritchie
Stars: Henry Cavill, Armie Hammer

• • • • •

No one in mainstream cinema does man-love like Guy Ritchie. The real entertainment factor in "Sherlock Holmes" was the bitchy repartee between Holmes and Watson. There's a token female in "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." — a slinky mechanic (Alicia Vikander) whose atomic scientist uncle has been kidnapped by dastardly forces. But the real passion is between its two spies: American Napoleon Solo (Henry Cavill) and Russian Illya Kuryakin (Armie Hammer).

When they first make eye contact during a car chase, it's hate-love at first sight.

The studio has done a terrible job explaining to the kids what the source is, namely one of the '60s better Bond knockoffs, which banded together U.S. and Soviet powers. For better and for worse, "U.N.C.L.E." plays like a supersized episode — inconsequential, an excuse for smirky fun and the occasional (though too occasional) old-school gadget, bound to be repeated, with mild variations, over untold seasons. Cavill and Hammer aren't Tracy and Hepburn, or Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law, but they, and Ritchie's direction, are personable enough to wish the next installment was next week. MP

'Compton' gives NWA their Great Men movie

'Straight Outta Compton'

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Even a cheesy biopic about N.W.A. would be a political act. It means the band had gone from being the scourge of the right wing and scolds in general to becoming official Great Men, their story ready to become myth. For the record, "Straight Outta Compton" is only part cheese, with sometimes on-the-nose expository dialogue and producers Ice Cube and Dr. Dre softening some of the punches.

But they don't soften all of them. Every scene has life and, especially in the galvanizing first half, real, furious anger. It underlines what should have been clear from their songs — because the lyrics, you know, talked about it — but was often ignored: They weren't thugs but artists trying to beam their message of desperation from an ignored chunk of the world to the masses.

The first half is better than the inescapably messy second, which extends the story post-breakup, resolving things with the death of Eazy-E (an uncanny Jason Mitchell). But the second half also shows true commitment. It's a mix of bad biopic tropes and good ones, offering the very unbiopic message that even the fieriest firebrand chills out.

A key scene in "Straight Outta Compton" finds the members of N.W.A. shaken down by police officers while they stand on the sidewalk. UNIVERSAL PICTURES

About the soundtrack

It's been 16 years since Dr. Dre released a studio album, but the rapper is back with "Compton," the film's soundtrack, out now. Eminem, Kendrick Lamar, Snoop Dogg and Ice Cube are all featured on the album, and while it's being praised overall, the song "Medicine Man," featuring Eminem, is getting slammed for its controversial lyrics referencing rape. "I even make the b— I rape c—," he raps on the track. Elsewhere on the album, Dr. Dre takes on various social and political issues, including racism. It's as if he's been sitting back studying culture, waiting for his moment to comment.

In "Best of Enemies," Gore Vidal, in focus, waits to pounce on William F. Buckley as they debate during the 1968 Democratic National Convention. MAGNOLIA PICTURES

'Best of Enemies'

Director: Robert Gordon, Morgan Neville
Genre: Documentary
Rating: NR

You can head to YouTube to watch Gore Vidal and William F. Buckley's infamous smackdowns during the 1968 Democratic National Convention, including the one where the pithy put-downs became so intense that the usually unflappable Buckley lost it and called Vidal a "queer" on national television. "Best of Enemies" offers not only that moment (and its context) but also a sad portrait of two quietly tragic men.

Hired by ABC to debate in what was a major television event, Buckley and Vidal stood, with their proud smirks, on opposite sides of the sociopolitical continuum. Ideally, the two would have had a love-hate relationship, with one forever driven by the other to up his game. Instead, they went too far and became more like exes who couldn't even hear each other's name without fuming.

"Enemies" doesn't dare pick sides (at least not explicitly). And it summons up an era when the political divide was even more chasmic — when tussles were somehow nastier but where the people waging them on television were funnier and far better spoken. Given our age of artless shouting and rabid anti-intellectualism, watching Vidal and Buckley calmly spar, with their patrician accents and cutting wits, is like peering into an alien world. In the clips, Buckley is spouting straight-up racism, but he's doing it so articulately and euphoniously that even a kale-addict leftie with a bumper obscured by stickers would find him lovable.

But it's the postscript that takes it to another level. Buckley's hipish conservatism lives on in the always energized Republican party, while society's more progressive attitudes toward sex and gender — while not quite the bacchanalian utopia that Vidal envisioned — would, to a rightie from 1968, seem downright Caligulan.

But the architects of the future tend to get chucked aside, and Buckley and Vidal were soon treated as icons of a bygone era. "Enemies" reclaims them, showing both of them as tragic figures who went out in a highly quotable blaze of glory. MP

Machine Gun Kelly doesn't want to take a selfie with you

Machine Gun Kelly's new album "General Admission" is out this fall. CASEY MCPERRY

Usually when a musician disappears from the spotlight for a few years, he or she has to consciously build the momentum back up. That is not the case with Machine Gun Kelly. Though it's been three years since his last album, he is reemerging on the scene with a highly anticipated new release ("General Admission," out this fall), a naked photoshoot for Inked magazine and paparazzi trailing him and girlfriend Amber Rose. And his 1.5 million Instagram followers haven't gone anywhere.

"Part of being a fan is waiting," Kelly says. "Fourteen-year-olds growing up in 2015 don't know what it's like to be a true fan because social media makes [celebrities] too accessible. They demand a response. I wanted to give [fans] a moment of anticipation, like what I felt from my favorite artists growing up."

Straight from his journal

While Kelly's music has always been rooted in storytelling, he says his new album in particular gives deeply personal, specific details about what he's been facing the past few years. "[I experienced] a lot of happy moments, a lot of painful moments and some reality checks," he says.

"There were some moments of seeing five missed calls from my daughter because we were supposed to FaceTime, but I got so caught up in recording and getting high that I completely forgot."

Struggling to stay sober

The rapper has been open with his struggles of being addicted to heroin, and though he attended rehab in the past after his habit led him to homelessness, he says he is still using drugs. "It's just part of the lifestyle. Being on 10-hour drives and late nights leads to temptations. You just can't escape it."

On that whole Meek Mill/Drake beef

Still, there's plenty about hip-hop culture that he loves, like the fighting words rappers can't help but throw at each other. When asked what he thinks about the drama going down between Drake and his friend and collaborator Meek Mill, Kelly says, "I love it. That's what hip-hop is all about. Hip-hop is about being a pit bull and going for the top spot." And now that he's back in the spotlight, he's ready for haters to take their shot. "I can't wait for someone to try that bulls— with me."

Olsen twins in hot water over intern pay

Not cool, ladies. Not cool. Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen are having a less-than-awesome week, as the former child stars are being sued by a former intern, Shahista Lalani, for being overworked with no pay. Lalani is leading a class-action lawsuit against the twins' company, Dualstar Entertainment, where she worked as an intern in 2012. "I was doing the work of three interns," Lalani says of her time under the designer for the Olsens' The Row label, according to the New York Post. "I was talking to her all day, all night. Emails at nighttime for the next day — like, 10 p.m. at night. It was, like, 100 degrees outside. I'd just be sweating to death. I probably carried, like, 50 pounds worth of trench coats." Sounds like someone forgot to watch "The Devil Wears Prada" before starting her internship.

"You're like an employee, except you're not getting paid," she added. "They're kind of mean to you. Other interns have cried. I'd see a lot of kids crying doing coffee runs, photocopying stuff." That … sounds about normal for an internship in the fashion world. Lalani does say that the Olsen twins themselves are totes cool, though: "They're really nice people. They were never mean to anyone."

Oh, and in a great example of corporate shade, a rep for the company simply says, "Dualstar is not aware of this [lawsuit.]" You got burned, dude. Now go get me some coffee.

Kristen Stewart is not coming out

THE WORD

Ned Ehrbar takes on the world of gossip.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

During her chat with Nylon magazine, former "Twilight" star Kirsten Stewart was asked to define her sexuality, but she'd rather not, if that's cool. "I don't feel like it would be true for me to be like, 'I'm coming out!'" she says. "I think in three or four years, there are going to be a whole lot more people who don't think it's necessary to figure out if you're gay or straight. It's, like, just do your thing."

And apparently for her, doing her thing involves keeping her ongoing war with the paparazzi going. "It's like I'm involved in a weekly comic book. I have this assigned personality — which I helped create, I suppose. People stand to make a lot of money on people like me — it's this booming industry, so why would you go and change the character that people are paying for?" she says. "It's funny when older actors are like, 'Just give them a smile.' I'm, like, 'You have no idea what you're talking about, but thanks!' It must've been awesome without the Internet."

Aries You will be the focus of positive attention. Others will be glad to listen to your ideas. This is a great time to drum up support for a venture.

Taurus You will face a frustrating challenge. Things will not go as smoothly as you had hoped unless you are prepared to slow down.

Gemini Communication will come into play as you sort through some disturbing problems. Effort will bring resolution to issues that arise.

Cancer Financial woes are evident, especially if you are handling other people's affairs. Make sure all the paperwork is complete and accurate.

Leo Use your energy wisely. Take on a physical challenge that will pump you up and get you motivated to expand your interests.

Virgo Someone will be reluctant to divulge important information. Be prepared to dig deep in order to get the answers you are looking for.

Libra You are brimming with confidence and innovative ideas. If you speak up, you will leave a favorable impression on someone.

Scorpio If you aren't happy with your current situation, make a change. Pick up the skills you will need to move to an interesting vocation.

Sagittarius Focus less on what others are doing and more on your own tasks. You can get a great deal done if you refuse to let anyone interfere.

Capricorn Look over your personal financial plan. You will receive a tempting offer, but make sure everything is on the up-and-up.

Aquarius Revealing too much information to a new acquaintance will turn out to be costly. Don't do anything that will leave you vulnerable.

Pisces Your outgoing personality will lead to an unexpected offer. Your thirst for knowledge will send you in a new direction. EUGENIA LAST

The Diving Horse

The difference between running a restaurant in the city and one down the shore, according to Dan Clark, is everyone is a lot happier at the beach.

"There's a whole different vibe. Everyone is just in better spirits when they're crossing the bridge," says Clark, who co-owns The Diving Horse, a dinner-only BYOB in Avalon that he describes as a "sea-to-table" restaurant. Clark and business partner Ed Hackett also own the (deservedly) popular Pub & Kitchen and Filter Dining Room, both in Philly.

The restaurant opens just for the summer season — until a week after Labor Day — so you only have a few chances left to snag a seat at the prix fixe Sunday suppers, served family-style inside the comfortably rustic dining room or on the communal tables out on the deck.

You won't go wrong with the locally sourced nightly menu either, which emphasizes summer and seafood with dishes like the heirloom tomato and strawberry salad and the wedge salad with jumbo lump crab, both appetizers, or the Barnegat Light scallops with corn succotash and the catch-of-the-day fish stew.

Sax Prix

Boutique hotel Reeds at Shelter Haven in Stone Harbor turned its Sax restaurant into a summer-long prix fixe spot with a decor makeover and a new menu. Eat there now, before it goes back to being a "regular" restaurant.

You can order individual dishes a la carte off the fixed-price menu, which has several options in each category. But unless you're planning to be the one nibbling only on the opening focaccia and maybe a side of wild mushrooms, the best deal is sticking with the set $79/person. It includes an amuse-bouche, an oversized appetizer (per person, though it's easily enough for two or three to start their meal), a palate-cleansing intermezzo, an entree and a dessert.

Heirloom tomato salad at The Diving Horse
PROVIDED

Dishes change; one Friday evening, the waiter wisely steered us toward the (large) grilled Spanish octopus appetizer, with a smear of piquillo pepper paste on the plate, and, for a vegan at the table, a toasted farro salad with beets, apple and Marcona almonds. Main course options embraced both land and sea, ranging from the lighter seared yellowfin sesame tuna to the heavier beef tenderloin.

For dessert, go with the ricotta beignets, of course.

The new French Quarter

Two of Philly's best French meals can be found south of South.

A.D. AMOROSI
@ MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

French cuisine is usually served atop white linen, in Rittenhouse spots like Lacroix. So it's a surprise to find two of Philadelphia's best classically French menus below South Street.

French-born chef Pierre Calmels recently returned to cook at Bibou on Eighth Street and Kimball (between Carpenter and Washington) after two years working at his other restaurant, Le Cheri in Rittenhouse.

Nearby, David Ansill made the move to Good King Tavern, at Seventh and Kater. It's a return to the cuisine he was known for at Pif, an innovative "French peasant bistro" that closed in 2007 — and was at Bibou's current address.

"This whole area, with Bibou and [Bistrot La] Minette and us, it's the French Quarter down here," says Ansill, who is also the chef at Spanish spot Bar Ferdinand across town in Northern Liberties. "I use classical French techniques and cross borders at Ferdiand. That skill, that feel never goes away."

The owners of Ferdinand, Owen Kamihira, and Good King, Bernard Grigri and his daughter Chloe, are friends. When Good King lost its chef, Ansill stepped up to oversee both restaurants. "I liked the challenge of keeping French cuisine affordable yet chef-driven," he says.

Chloe Grigri adds that Good King is striving to reinvent French classics "with his special touch and expertise, undefinable but uniquely David's."

For Chef Calmels and wife/restaurant co-owner Charlotte, the non-stuffy neighborhood vibe and affordability are why they set up shop south of South.

"It's lovely there," says the onetime Le Bec-Fin chef. "When Pif closed, we drove by all the time. That neighborhood spoke to us. We knew we'd have to offer diners something special, though.

"Why else would they walk out their front door, let alone take a $10 cab from Center City?"

The menu at Bibou, a BYOB, is prix fixe, with seven courses for $100. Good King is more casual.

An amuse-bouche of confit potatoes with creme fraiche and salmon roe at Good King Tavern. STEPHANIE SMITH

On the menu

At Good King Tavern, Ansill and sous chef Mike Blau have put together a menu with classics like escargot and duck confit, as well as a salmon pave with truffle, almond, Dijon and fresh pea shoots.

Bibou offers a different menu each week: This week, dishes include chilled kabocha squash and crab bisque, foie gras with pumpkin bread in a red wine duck sauce and lamp strip loin.

FATHOM

Norwegian Escape

In November, Norwegian Cruise Line's newest build, the 4,248-passenger Norwegian Escape, will begin sailing out of Miami to the Bahamas and the Caribbean. Exciting new features include a restaurant created with Philadelphia-based Food Network star and "Iron Chef" Jose Garces, a Jimmy Buffett-themed margarita bar, a supper club with a John Hughes homage and the largest water park at sea. During the inaugural season, six-night eastern Caribbean cruises start at $569 per person.

Anthem of the Seas

Also in November, Royal Caribbean's newest ship, Anthem of the Seas, will begin sailing to the Caribbean out of New York City. The ship's already celebrated features include bumper cars, a bar with robot bartenders, an Italian restaurant by British celebrity chef Jamie Oliver and a skydiving simulator. Five-night cruises from Cape Liberty, New Jersey, to Bermuda start at $557.

Fathom

Starting in May 2016, Carnival's new Fathom brand, which will focus on volunteerism and cultural exchange, will offer alternating weekly sailings to Cuba and the Dominican Republic. Carnival announced in July that the company has received approval from both the U.S. Department of the Treasury and the U.S. Department of Commerce to begin these regular sailings to Cuba. The announcement comes in the wake of President Barack Obama's declaration of a loosening of restrictions on travel to the island. These weekly sailings will be on the line's first ship, the 710-passenger Adonia. Prices for the seven-day immersion cruises will start at $2,990 per person and include cultural and social impact activities.

While Carnival is the first U.S. cruise corporation to announce regular sailings, U.S. governmental approval is just the first step in what Carnival President Arnold Donald says is a 12-step process to begin sailing to Cuba.

Virgin Cruises

It's still a few years away, but that doesn't mean we can't begin getting excited now. Starting in 2020, Virgin Cruises will offer seven-day Caribbean cruises out of Miami when they launch. The U.K.-based luxury brand is sure to shake things up in the Caribbean's warm yet serene waters, where cruisers haven't seen anything quite this trendy on the high seas.

The new line's ships, of which three have been ordered, will carry 2,860 passengers each. Prices for the indulgence of sailing the Caribbean in style have not yet been announced.

Saddle up with a vacation on horseback

No need to "Go West, Young Man" to find your inner cowboy. From cattle drives to family-oriented ranch vacations, it's easy to horse around locally.

Who hasn't wanted to wrangle cattle or explore a forest trail from the back of a horse? The Northeast has resorts and guest ranches that specialize in equestrian pursuits. Most are geared for riders with no to moderate experience, and safety is paramount. The horses are patient "been there, done that" steeds.

There's a lot more than trail riding. Family resorts have pools, games and kids' activities, while others have spas and gourmet dining. It's worth checking for specials, including singles weekends and bachelor/bachelorette parties. Here are good places to pull on your boots and breeches:

Malibu Dude Ranch

Milford, Pennsylvania
www.malibududeranch.com
"Head 'em up, move 'em out" at this all-inclusive working cattle ranch in the Poconos. Children age 8 and up can join the trail rides, while younger buckaroos have pony rides. There are three-hour cattle drives for riders 13 or over. Through Labor Day, there's a Saturday night rodeo, while nonhorse options include an indoor pool, minigolf and lakeside cookouts.

Rockinghorse Ranch

At this highly rated, all-inclusive family resort, kids age 7 and up can ride, while there are pony rides for younger kids. There's a kids' program for those age 6-12 and a nursery for newborn to 5 years with a 1-to-3 care ratio. Activities include an indoor water park, wagon rides and meeting the resident camel and zebra.

B and B Guest Ranch

Cooperstown, New York
www.bandbranch.com
This ranch features just five guest rooms, plus a riding stable, a spa and wellness center and a working community agriculture farm with a farm-to-table kitchen. If you want to vacation with your own horse, they welcome visiting boarders.

Icelandic Horse Farm

Waitsfield, Vermont
www.icelandichorses.com
Come here for a very civilized adventure with luxury accommodations, fine dining and the chance to ride these unusually gaited horses. Riders must be 10 years old or older, and an intermediate level of experience is preferred, although they can provide instruction for beginners. Full- and half-day trail rides and two- to six-day treks are available.

Mountain Top Inn and Resort

Chittenden, Vermont
www.mountaintopinn.com
In Central Vermont, the focus here is on the outdoors and wellness. Trail rides are high on the activities list, including a three-hour lunch ride. If you want to take lessons, a certified instructor is in residence. This is another place to vacation with your horse. Other activities include yoga classes, boating and savoring the views.

Marriott Ranch

Hume, Virginia
www.marriottranch.com
Romantic trail rides (the Chaps and Chardonnay Package), cowboying (City Slicker Package with lessons in "cattle skills") and full-day trail rides are on offer at this luxury location in the Blue Ridge. There are 90-minute trail rides and a dinner ride with steak and cowboy songs at twilight.

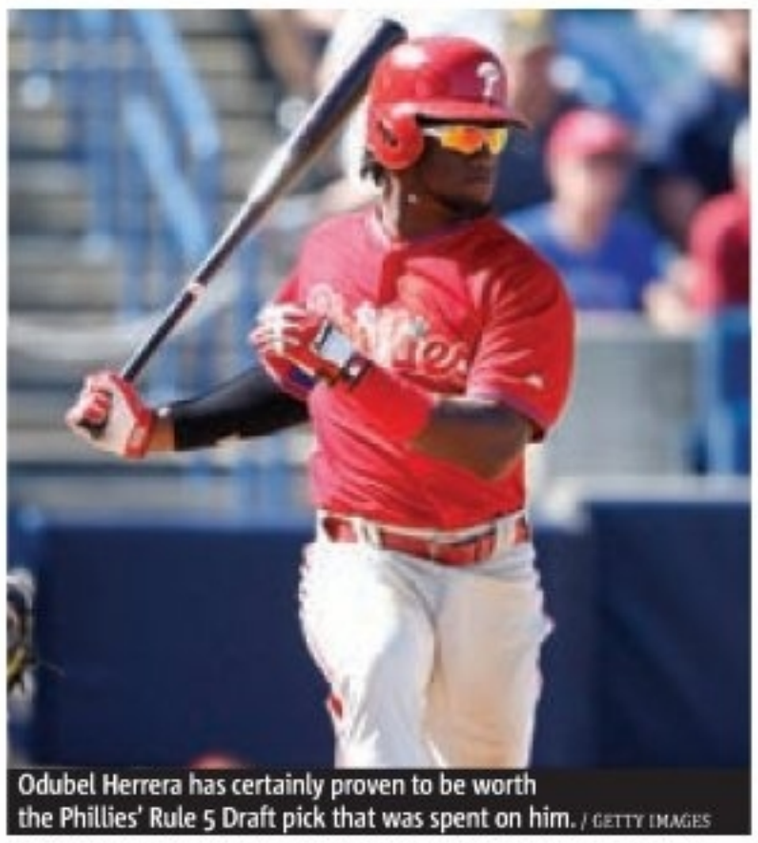
Bills claim Jets' sucker puncher

After the Jets released linebacker Ikemefuna Enemkpali for his "sucker punch" to Geno Smith's face (a strike that broke the quarterback's jaw), Rex Ryan decided to give the player a second chance, signing him Wednesday.

Cy Young front-runner is impressed by Phils hitters

MLB. Dodgers' ace Zach Grienke thinks the Phillies' offense has a bright future.



Odubel Herrera has certainly proven to be worth the Phillies' Rule 5 Draft pick that was spent on him. / GETTY IMAGES

Zach Greinke is a straight-shooter. Hyperbole is not part of the overwhelming NL Cy Young favorite's arsenal. That's the way it is for Greinke, who suffers from a social anxiety disorder.

After Greinke was roughed up by the Phillies last week, he was asked what he thought of their young hitters.

"From one to five, they are as good as any top five in the game right now," Greinke said.

That's high praise from the most dominant pitcher of 2015.

"The thing is that there is usually one guy that's easy to pitch to in a team's top five," Greinke explained. "It might be the leadoff hitter or the two-hole guy. But not with the Phillies. They don't have a Mike Trout but they're all tough. Dom Brown is hitting like he did when he was on that hot streak (in 2013). The young kids they have are really good."

There's no doubt that the Phillies' offense has picked it up considerably due to the second-half play of Cesar Hernandez, Odubel Herrera, Maikel Franco, Ryan Howard and Brown.

During the 22 games the Phillies five started after the break, Pete Mackanin's team outscored opponents 113-86. The Phillies averaged 5.1 runs per game during that span, tops in the NL. Herrera's batting average has swelled to .290 thanks to the 22-game run, in which he produced a .371/.405/.543 slashline. Herrera has an astounding .436 average with balls in play. Here's more slashlines from that period: Howard .269/.337/.487, Brown .290/.329/.507 and Hernandez .314/.359/.430

There is clearly a reason for the surge.

"They have good young hitters and Howard has picked it up like he usually does in August," Dodgers manager Don Mattingly said. "They have some impressive hitters over there."

There's finally some protection for Franco, who is in the NL Rookie of the Year conversation.

"It's good to see that we're all swinging the bats," said Franco, who is sitting out a few days after being hit in the wrist Tuesday. "When we hit like we are, we can win games."

Greinke is impressed.

"They have a future. You have to like what you see. It'll be interesting to see where they go from here now that they've started hitting."

Pat Shurmur says that Darren Sproles is not only great with the ball in his hands, but the fact that he often commands double coverage creates opportunities for other Eagles players. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Eagles contemplating using three RBs at once

NFL. Pat Shurmur says the Birds will sometimes have DeMarco Murray, Darren Sproles and Ryan Mathews on the field all at the same time.

Darren Sproles, DeMarco Murray and Ryan Mathews.

The Eagles have three household names atop the depth chart at running back. But as the first preseason game approaches this Sunday the question remains: How will Chip Kelly use them in his fast-paced offense?

"The plan is we are excited that both or either of them will be in there at any time," Eagles offensive coordinator Pat Shurmur told the media Wednesday. "For the running backs it takes a village. It takes a group of running backs when you want to run the ball like we do. We are fortunate that every guy we put in there can run the ball the way we want it run, and pass protect, and certainly have good enough hands to catch the ball when we throw it to them."

Murray will likely be the main workhorse, though he won't be utilized as often as he was in Dallas, where he tallied nearly 500 touches during his breakout, NFL-leading season.

But Mathews is a smart, downhill runner ad was the No. 1 in San Diego before he came to Philadelphia, and he can offer a respite for Murray without the Birds losing a single thing.

And then there is Sproles, who may be small (he's just 5-foot-6) but who can really do it all.

"We like to get him the ball steadily and consistently," Shurmur said. "He's certainly a unique, outstanding player. He's as good as any receiver we have. You can hand him the football, you can extend him to throw him the ball or you can throw it to him out of the backfield. We have to make sure we throw him the ball."

However the Eagles utilize their three-headed monster, it will certainly give defensive coordinators throughout the league headaches. Especially if a defense needs to contend with all three.

"I think we have to find that smooth mix between DeMarco, Ryan and Darren," Shurmur said. "And there's no reason we can't put all three in at the same time."

All three have alternated reps with the No. 1 offense thus far in camp.

"I think [DeMarco Murray's] a guy that's got very good vision, and I think by having good vision, you know when it's time to hit the hole or time to do something else. I think that can be said, also, about Ryan Mathews and then certainly Darren Sproles, and actually Kevin [Monangai] and Raheem [Mostert] have done a good job at that as well." Pat Shurmur

3 Things to watch for as Eagles host Colts Sunday

NFL. The Eagles are anxious to face a live opponent in their first preseason game this weekend.

The Eagles look like a team completely in sync and on the same page in training camp.

As a cohesive unit, the Eagles' offense is swift and quick, with Sam Bradford and the Birds' quarterbacks finding their targets downfield with ample time and accuracy.

And on defense, the strength and speed is easily discernible as the revamped unit looks to build off its confidence daily at the NovaCare center. But when they cross the street to Lincoln Financial Field Sunday, everything could change.

With the Colts slated to face Philly in its first preseason game, a 1 p.m. kickoff, the jury is still out on many roster spots, position battles and, most importantly, how this team will react to a full-speed, full-contact game. Here are three things we will be watching this weekend.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

1 Tackle football

It's no secret that Chip Kelly has a lot of guys returning from injuries on his roster, and a few more who have big question marks as to their ability to contribute.

While the coach is monitoring practices with his sports science regimen, it doesn't matter how good his team looks in drills in practice.

"People come out really good on seven-on-seven," Riley Cooper said after practice this week, "and when you have the pads on, and people are trying to take your head off and playing real football, the game is a little different. Some guys can look great in seven-on-seven, wide receivers, running backs and quarterbacks, and with them pads on, it's a different ball game."

2 Who plays where?

Kelly is very high on players who can play multiple positions, and he has a lot of them on his 90-man roster. However, there is a lot left to be determined as to who will start and where.

While playing time is not a pivotal measure of importance in the first preseason game, it will be interesting to see what groups and packages see the field, and for how long, on Sunday.

"We have an idea of what we want to do with each player as the games go on," Eagles offensive coordinator Pat Shurmur said. "What we want to do with the 1's and 2's and 3's — it's in pencil, a broad stroke of how we want the preseason to look."

3 Old friends

While the game technically means nothing, there will be a little extra motivation on both sides as the Colts boast some familiar faces.

The Eagles' two longest-tenured players prior to this season were guard Todd Herremans and defensive end/linebacker Trent Cole, both of whom will be lining up opposite their former teammates Sunday.

And in addition, running back Frank Gore, who reportedly came very close to being the Eagles' running back this spring, is also playing in Indy, making his first visit to Philly since making his offseason decision.
